

THE REAL heart of AMERICA

... looks a lot like this.

A peaceful, healthy and safe place to live, work and raise a family.

In fact, the vast majority of our great country is more pastoral than political. More in tune with itself than elected "leaders" are with their constituents.

The Real America looks and feels like a place you belong. No corporate jets. No "mega" banks. No hedge fund managers. And few — if any — elected officials who view what they do as a "career path."

The Real America we call home is a place we're proud of. Through good times and bad, we're here for the long-term. No whining. No complaining. No bailouts.
